The Apostolic Vatican Palace in Rome is one of the world’s great repositories of art, and a witness to western culture. Its construction lasted for centuries and its grandeur reflects not just an imperial papacy but the celebratory and didactic power of art and architecture. This illustrated talk will take us through the complex of buildings that constitute the palace, visiting both the museum open to the public and some private spaces difficult to access but no less splendid.